

Virtual Learning

The 3 Pillars of Virtual Learning

Web conferencing is just scratching the surface of virtual learning. The real magic happens when educators blend asynchronous on-demand video learning with synchronous student-instructor collaboration via web conferencing — seamlessly integrated within the learning management system.

"I don't use the virtual classroom to deliver content, I use it to discuss content."

— Roberto Dona, Professor, Xi'an Jiaotong-Liverpool University

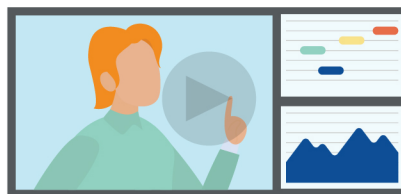

WEB CONFERENCE

WHAT IT IS

Live, two-way video communication between two or more people

BEST FOR

- Office Hours
- 1:1 Collaboration
- Small Group Discussions

STREAMING VIDEO

WHAT IT IS

Live or on-demand video, enriched with interactive features, accessibly by any number of viewers

BEST FOR

- Lectures
- Micro-content
- Flipped classroom
- Quizzing
- Analytics
- Video Library

LMS

WHAT IT IS

A familiar, central access point for all virtual learning tools

BEST FOR

Empowering students to learn where they feel most comfortable

Adapting to the Virtual Classroom

The flipped classroom concept, blending on-demand content with real-time discussion, has never been more relevant than it is today. If conferencing systems are your virtual, real-time classrooms, on-demand streaming video is your textbook.

- START THE WEEK
Read, watch, and study assigned content in LMS
- MID-WEEK
Pre-recorded lectures in Mediasite via LMS
- END OF WEEK
Live class discussions via web conferencing

How Virtual Learning Technologies Compare

Video is powerful — but it's important to pick the right tool for the right job. Knowing how asynchronous video learning tools like Mediasite complement synchronous web conferencing tools will help instructors choose the right technology.

	WEB CONFERENCE synchronous learning	STREAMING VIDEO asynchronous learning
