Why is a Supercut Scissor different?

They are designed to offer superb control while reducing hand fatigue.

The construction offers advantages for surgeons.

Supercut Scissors allow the user to cut multiple layers with precision and ease.

The scissors have one razor sharp blade and one micro-serrated blade.

The razor sharp edge provides a clean cut with minimal tissue damage.

The serrated edge holds the tissue to prevent it from slipping while the user is making an incision.

Step 1: Rinse & Clean Instruments

Rinse and clean instruments prior to first use, as well as after each use. Clean the instruments using an ultrasonic cleaning unit, automatic washer, or manually. Ensure you use a neutral (pH = 7) detergent to avoid staining and corrosion.

Manual Cleaning Tips: Use a nylon brush on instruments except those with files or ridges in which a wire brush is recommended.

Check each instrument for debris, stains, and proper function prior to rinsing.

If the instrument(s) are staining, use instrument stain remover during this process.

Rinse the instruments and make sure there is no debris or detergent remaining in the hinges or locks. Allow the instruments to dry completely before autoclaving.

Once dry, spray all instruments that have moving parts with instrument milk or lube.

DO NOT USE OIL.

Step 2: Autoclave Instrument Tips

Autoclave instruments individually or in packs using cloth wraps or autoclavable bags.

We do not recommend using paper drape material because it can cause the instruments to stain.

Ensure each instrument is unlocked in the open position as it will affect sterility and may cause the instrument to crack during the heating and cooling process.

For cold sterilization, use a soaking tray. DO NOT place any tungsten carbide instruments in this solution as it may destroy the inserts.

What is instrument staining?

Staining is a surface deposit on instruments, often mistaken for rust. After autoclaving, you may notice a stain on your instruments. Rusting instruments are very rare, especially when you purchase high quality German or USI brand instruments. Stains on instruments appear in many colors and in most cases the colors tell you about the origin of the stain.

Orange/Brown Stain

The problem is most often a phosphate layer (brown to light orange) on the instrument, which develops as a result of any of the following causes: water sources, detergents used to wash and clean instruments, surgical wrappings, cold sterilization solutions, or dried blood.

Black Stain

The most common black stains are due to an acid reaction. Black stains may result from detergents used to clean the instrument; similar to brown stains caused by high pH detergents. The black acid type stain can be caused by low pH (less than six) during autoclaving.

Dark Brown Stain

Dark brown stains are usually a result of dried blood left on an instrument. Blood should be removed from the surface of the instrument immediately. It will break down the instrument's surface chemical reaction.

Blue/Black Stain

These are usually a result of plating and are extremely difficult to remove from the surface. The surface beneath the stain is always smooth, but the instrument may have to be refinished to obtain good results. The cause for this stain is the mixing of dissimilar metals in ultrasonic cleaners and during autoclaving. Multi-color stains are most often due to excessive heat (chromium oxide stains) and actually show rainbow colors with a blue or brown overtone. When the instrument shows these heat stains, it may have lost part of its original hardness, and may not perform well.
